

Financial Aid

To help attract the finest students to its Graduate School of Arts and Sciences, and to support the scholars who will perpetuate the advancement of knowledge, Yale University devotes substantial resources to financial aid for its graduate students. The steady trend of financial aid at Yale has been toward full funding for all Ph.D. students, and few schools can rival the breadth of support that Yale provides. Of the approximately 400 Ph.D. students entering the Graduate School in the fall of 2006, all were offered a financial aid package consisting of four years of full tuition, at least four years of stipend support and comprehensive health care coverage, as well as stipends for summer work and a dissertation year fellowship. For 2006-2007, graduate student stipends have been set at $18,000; students are also awarded summer research support of 3,500 for 3 summers each. The tuition fellowship covers the cost of annual tuition for the four years that tuition is charged. In the 2005-2006 academic year, the University allocated more than $67 million for financial aid for graduate students. Further information can be obtained on the Office of Financial Aid & Resources' website at <http://www.yale.edu/graduateschool/financial/index.html>

Equal Opportunity Statement

The University is committed to basing judgments concerning the admission, education, and employment of individuals upon their qualifications and abilities and affirmatively seeks to attract to its faculty, staff, and student body qualified persons of diverse backgrounds. In accordance with this policy and as delineated by federal and Connecticut law, Yale does not discriminate in admissions, educational programs, or employment against any individual on account of that individual's sex, race, color, religion, age, disability, status as a special disabled veteran, veteran of the Vietnam era, or other covered veteran, or national or ethnic origin; nor does Yale discriminate on the basis of sexual orientation. University policy is committed to affirmative action under law in employment of women, minority group members, individuals with disabilities, special disabled veterans, veterans of the Vietnam era, and other covered veterans. Inquiries concerning these policies may be referred to the Office for Equal Opportunity Programs, 104 William L. Harkness Hall, 203-432-0849 (voice / TDD). www.yale.edu/equalopportunity/policies/index.html

The Department of Linguistics is committed to providing a situation of free and open inquiry for all its students and faculty and fully supports Yale University's policies of non-discrimination, equal opportunity, and affirmative action in matters of admissions, education, and employment.

Statistics

For information on the number of applicants accepted and job placement of graduates go to the Linguistics Program profile on the Yale Graduate School website.